

Should I bathe my dog before taking him to my groomer?

One of the worst problems that confront groomers is to work on a dog that has been bathed without being brushed out completely. The result of such a practice is a coat that is so

Ask your groomer if bathing at home prior to grooming is recommended, and always brush your dog properly before bathing.

Should my cat be groomed?

Longhaired cats need combing occasionally to prevent matted fur. Many cats also need bathing at times, if they are not capable of achieving the neatness that is usually attributed to cats. Check to see if your groomer provides this service for cats.

Remember that professional PCSA groomers are specially equipped with grooming equipment that is best for your pet. They can advise you of techniques for grooming your dog at home, and can detect potential health problems, which should be handled by your veterinarian, before you might ordinarily notice them. Problems such as possible ear infections or mites, skin disorders, unusual growths, and parasites, are more easily detected as a result of regular grooming. Your groomer is familiar with the type of grooming that will make your pet look his or her best and can and, in cooperation with your veterinarian, medicated baths for special problems. Good health and good looks go hand in hand with good grooming. The best team for accomplishing this is your veterinarian, your PCSA professional, and you.

Your PCSA member is devoted to your pet's well being. Look for the membership certificate proudly displayed.
